FILMMAKING

Samoyedic Diary (Nenets: Samoad' ila' padar'; Russian: Samodiiskii dnevnik), 2016. [00:42] [in Russian and Nenets] Watch here: <https://youtu.be/A48p9hY1adI>

This visual anthropology film is based on the reels shot by the Soviet ethnography couple Georgii and Ekaterina Prokofievs among the European Nenets in 1929–30. The original seven cinematographic reels are kept at the Peter the Great Museum of Anthropology and Ethnography (Kunstkamera) in Saint Petersburg. Edited as an ethnographic diary and supplemented by stories from Prokofievs' letters and field notes, the film tells the story of Nenets communities living on the Matochkin Shar strait during the first year of the Soviet collectivization campaign. Besides its socio-political relevance, this documentary is of particular historical significance as it was the first film made by ethnographers in the Soviet Arctic. The film contains Nenets and Russian subtitles (created in collaboration with Khadri Okotetto) and is accompanied by songs from two famous Nenets singers, Tatiana Lar and Elena Ufimtseva.

You can watch the 2016 interview with Dmitry Arzyutov about the history of the film [in Russian] here: <https://youtu.be/TZT4lUqtaWM>
